MORE TOUR TIMES RELEASED FOR EXTENDED WASHINGTON D.C. TEMPLE PUBLIC OPEN HOUSE Hundreds of New Reservation Times Available thru June 11, 2022

Based on strong ongoing demand from the public, the Washington D.C. Temple Open House has now been extended until June 11, 2022. New tour times and days were made available online today.

Reservations for the week of June 6-11 are now available at ww.dctemple.org for both vehicle parking and shuttle reservations from the nearby Forest Glenn metro station. The reservations are free of charge and open to all people.

Parking and shuttle reservations can now be made until June 11, adding hundreds of additional possibilities for people to tour the Temple as part of this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

“The response continues to inspire us. We want as many people as possible to have a chance to ‘Come & See’ for themselves,” said Kathryn Colton, co-chair of the Washington, D.C. Temple Open House Committee.

Organizers of the Open House encouraged people to consider the many public transportation options available when making their plans to visit the Washington, D.C. Temple. A dedicated shuttle will be made available from the Forest Glen metro station every weekday (early evening hours until closing time). Every effort is being made to minimize traffic in the area out of respect for the local neighbors and to ensure a pleasant experience for people visiting the Temple.

“As people grapple with a world filled with uncertainty, the Temple represents a place where we can feel connection, love and purpose. We invite everyone to learn more about the sacred promises we make in the Temple. This is an opportunity to open the doors and explain what we believe as followers of Jesus Christ. It is an invitation we make in friendship to people of all faiths,” said Anne Golightly, who directs communications for the Open House.
